

On Monday, November 1, 2010, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court reinstated an injunction temporarily barring the release of home addresses of all public school employees.

This Court order means that local and state agencies should until further notice deny requests pursuant to the Right-to-Know Law for the home addresses of any public school employees. In denying such a request, the agency should refer to the definition of a public record under 65 P.S. § 67.102 and cite the Court order.

This Order also means that the Office of Open Records is also barred from ordering release of home addresses of public school employees temporarily. Please be advised that this court order only affects the home addresses of public school employees. No other home addresses are affected.

Further, there is no deadline for the Supreme Court to issue its final decision on the matter of home addresses of public school employees. As such, this injunction will remain in place until further order of the Court.
