Parents can provide very valuable assistance in the area of homework through the following:

1. Provide reading and research material that will assist your child.
2. Show an interest in your child's work by making yourself available and listening. Encourage your child's best efforts as often as possible.
3. Provide a suitable time and place for your child to study.
4. Take your child to the public library. It can price resources that will enrich your child's homework assignment.
5. Check your child's rest, work and play periods so that there will be enough time for each activity.
6. Attend open school conferences, parent meetings and parent teas when possible.
7. Check your child's book bag for information. Read all notices and newsletters that come home with your child.
8. Visit our school to see your child's teacher, guidance counselor or a supervisor when a special home study problem arises. Contact the school by phone or letter when necessary.
9. Check for completion, accuracy and neatness when your child finishes an assignment.
10. Request homework assignments for short term absences and, if possible, home instruction for extended absences.

We feel strongly that an effective school program of instruction is strengthened through a meaningful program of home study. It is essential for pupils to complete homework assignments on a regular basis to meet the increasing demands of the learning process and higher performance standards.

Homework not only enriches the school learning experience for the child, but it also develops in pupils a sense of responsibility, self-reliance and pride. It reinforces work-study skills and develops study habits. It helps pupils to learn how to budget their time wisely. Your home and our school must work together as partners in the education process. We are grateful for your cooperation in the implementation of this policy.

Sincerely,

Christina Tettonis
