All his life he'd been called stupid. Dumb. Slow. It didn't help that his body seemed to be growing faster than his mind. It didn't help that people were afraid of him. Code	How the Nile River Led to Civilization in Ancient Egypt	Annotate
∞	The Nile River Valley is in Egypt. It is located in North Africa. The land along the river holds many clues about how Egyptians lived long ago. Because of the river, they were able to build a great civilization. Civilizations are always large groups of people who live and work together. The Nile River made civilizations possible in ancient Egypt.	This reminds me of when I learned about the Pyramids in 4th grade.

It is the longest river in the world. It is 4,200 miles long. Experts say people started living along its banks more than 8,000 years ago.

Good land for crops

Much of Egypt is covered in dry desert. It has little farmland. There was good land for growing crops along the Nile, though.

Long ago, food was not easy to find there. Over time, people learned that the Nile could provide plenty to eat. Fruit trees grew along the Nile. The river was full of fish.

The Nile flooded every year at about the same time. The water then drew back. It left behind rich, brown silt. This soil was great for growing many kinds of plants. Farmers dug short waterways from the river to their fields.

I agree with this because water is very important to any country.

More people and new tools

Egypt's population grew. More food was needed to feed more people. Farmers learned how to grow enough for everyone, and even more. This let others work at other jobs besides farming. Some became traders. Others made clothes and other goods to sell. They figured out smarter ways to work together.

The ancient Egyptians also invented new tools. These included copper chisels and needles. Metalworkers learned to create bronze, a stronger metal. The Egyptians also probably invented the potter's wheel. This tool made it easier to make pots and jars.

The calendar was one of the Egyptians' greatest inventions. Farmers needed to track the days to know when to plant. Their calendar helped them plan for when the Nile would flood.

How did the ancient Egyptians make their calendars? They wrote them on papyrus. Papyrus is like paper. It was made from reeds that grew in the Nile.

Writing also helped the Egyptians become a great civilization. They wrote their words as pictures, called hieroglyphics. This helped them keep records about their history.

Dry land protection

Egypt is a very dry land. There is sand as far as the eye can see. West of the Nile stretches the Sahara, the largest desert in the world. East of the Nile are other deserts.

These deserts protected ancient Egypt. Few enemies could cross the dry land to attack. Safe from invaders, Egyptians could work on improving their farming. They invented new tools. They were able to create beautiful art. They could think about religion and how to work together better.

Over time, the pyramids and big cities became symbols of this great culture. It lasted for several thousand years.

What problems did you face when completing this assignment? How did you solve this?	What was something satisfying to you about completing your assessment?	If you were a teacher, what comment would you make about this piece?	What is one goal you would set for yourself next time?
