What is Rare Disease Day?

Rare Disease Day is dedicated to raising awareness of rare diseases in the general public, policy makers, public authorities, industry representatives, health professionals and anyone who wants to learn. (rarediseaseday.org)

Highview is interested in raising money to donate to ATCP (A-T Children's Project) and National Organization for Albinism and Hypopigmentation.

The students will be asking their families to pledge for them the money they earn for doing chores around the house or any other way they earn money.

In order for adults to get involved we thought it would be great to wear Jeans on Friday February 28th. Wear your jeans and make a donation to the cause.

Why should you participate?

There are currently just over 7,000 rare diseases identified, affecting 30 million people in the US alone. Although these numbers are staggering, what is of even greater concern is that approximately 75% of those affected are children, making this disease category one of the most deadly and debilitating for our country's children. (atcp.org)

If wearing jeans, t-shirts, ribbons and/or pins and collecting $1 can help save a life...then, why not?
