

Remote Learning

Remote learning will go into effect for grades K-12 the week of March 23rd. DOE will support schools at all levels of readiness to deliver remote learning, and more information will be provided to families about online platforms in the coming days.

School officials and the Office of the Comptroller are working with Apple to purchase and give out up to 300,000 iPads and several telecommunications companies to help with internet access.

We will follow-up with a separate email when more information is available and check the DOE Coronavirus webpage regularly for the latest updates.

It is critical that all parents sign up for a New York City schools account for their children to access these remote learning programs. You can sign up for your account HERE.

DOE "Learn at Home" Resources

In addition to “remote learning”, the Department of Education is providing supplementary learning resources to students and parents for use during the school closure. To help students engage in educational material, DOE has shared resources for students in all grades, from Early Learn through elementary and middle school, and for high school. These materials should not replace “remote learning” plans, but during this unusual time, it is important that students supplement their course work

The materials on the grade-specific pages include:

- Guides and materials for instructional activities
- Recommended educational television shows
- Links to a variety of books, magazines, and websites on a wide range of topics that appeal to children at all ages
