Cook's Counselor Corner

During the month of March, we are focusing on 'perseverance' here at Pleasant View. Perseverance is such an important character trait because it is what helps us when times get hard to push through and find success. To me, the most important part of perseverance is having grit and a growth mindset. Grit is:

- Having perseverance to accomplish goals when things are challenging
- Having a growth mindset to support perseverance
- Being able to identify strategies and tactics to assess the situation and apply the right tools to improve the situation
- Having the ability to look beyond short-term concerns to reach long-term goals.

It is important we remember that failure and hardship can actually make us stronger. When students fail, it is actually an opportunity for them to apply some grit, persevere and learn.
