

The New York Public Library

Learn from Home with the Library

Though New York City schools and libraries are closed to help contain the spread of COVID-19, kids and teens—and their families—can still access a wide array of The New York Public Library's resources to support learning at home. From virtual tutoring to online databases, find the tools you need at: nypl.org/communitylearning

CHECK OUT SOME OF THE ONLINE RESOURCES NYPL OFFERS, INCLUDING:

Homework Help and Personal Online Tutoring

Get help with homework and projects with NYPL resources and our new partner in online tutoring, Brainfuse.

Databases and E-Resources

Search our extensive array of databases and e-resources for research. Don't forget to check out our expanded database offerings during our temporary closure.

Reading Resources

Need some good book recommendations? Or access to e-books? Read aloud suggestions? We've got all your at-home reading needs covered for kids of all ages.

Activities for Home

It's important for young minds to exercise their imaginations. We have ideas for arts and crafts, science experiments, and more fun activities that can be done at home.
