

Coyote's View from Home

Welcome back to Chemistry! Man have I missed being able to see and teach you all. This is an interesting time in all of our lives and I can't wait to hear from you all about what has been going on in your lives since the Coronavirus outbreak. We are all entering a new chapter in our lives called Continuous Learning that will be handled via some new methods of communication. This week I would like for you to become comfortable with these new forms of communication and your lessons will be centered on them and how you can communicate with me. The lessons will be to get you in the swing of things. All work will be turned in via email if you have that option. All work for the week is due the following Monday. For example, this week's work will be due on Monday April 13, 2020.

1. My email is kwest@tatumschools.org
2. I am setting up a remind class. You will be receiving an email with a code to join my remind class. You will need to get the app on your phone and use the code to join the class.
3. My cell phone number is (254) 592-9056
4. I will also be using Zoom for video and audio conferences. I hope you will be able to attend these, but if not they will be recorded so you can view or listen at time that work for you.
5. If you are not able to receive information via email, text or remind paper packets will be made available to you for pick up.

I will be available during normal school hours, from 8:00 -3:47 Monday through Thursday via the first two methods. I realize that some of you may need to communicate with me at different times and that is great.

I look forward to finishing out this exciting year with you all.
